TRADE CAPACITY BUILDING [Resource Guide]
Trade Capacity Building Resource Guide 2013

UNIDO has been mandated by the United Nations Chief Executives’ Board to coordinate an inter-agency mapping of trade capacity-building services and activities available to developing countries. The success of the first (2008) and second (2010) editions led to calls for an updated version of the Resource Guide, with expanded coverage of OECD and G-20 development partners.

In response to increased demand from development partners in the area of trade capacity building, UNIDO has now published an updated and expanded edition of the Resource Guide, extending its coverage to 31 multilateral agencies and 36 bilateral development partners.

What is new in the 2013 edition?

- Specific focus on technical assistance services that reduce the cost of trading, add a value chain perspective and promote South-South and triangular cooperation.
- A strong Aid for Trade (AfT) focus continues in the 2013 edition.
- The AfT strategies and their related aid agencies and programmes of a total of 36 bilateral development partners (OECD members and G-20 countries) are now featured in the Resource Guide.
- Trade-related services of 31 UN agencies and five regional development banks and six inter-agency cooperation mechanisms are included.
- Eight additional OECD members and four additional G-20 members have newly contributed to the 2013 edition of the Resource Guide.
- For the first time, all information is updated in an interactive web tool with search functions www.unido.org/tcbresourceguide2013

The 2013 edition of the Trade Capacity Building Resource Guide is now available free of charge. You can place your order by post or email:

The Resource Guide has been widely used as a reference tool both within and beyond the UN system, by countries, and by technical agencies.

It now increases visibility on multilateral and bilateral technical assistance in trade capacity building as a holistic contribution to better technical assistance programming.
