INTERNATIONAL NETWORK FOR SMALL AND MEDIUM SIZED ENTERPRISES (INSME)

Historical background

INSME was established in 2000 on the ideas and principles discussed at the first OECD ministerial conference on SMEs and globalization. It was formally founded under Italian law in 2004 in order to foster transnational cooperation and public-private partnership in the field of innovation and technology transfer to small and medium enterprises (SMEs). Since adequate access to innovation is a key factor for enterprises to be competitive, INSME stimulates SMEs' innovation processes and competitiveness by promoting and strengthening innovation services and transnational technology transfer provided by intermediaries and their networks.

- Promotion: INSME increases the visibility and access to members' services and skills by offering tools and occasions to showcase activities, projects and programmes;

- Partnerships: It launches joint projects on a voluntary basis, creates new partnerships for business opportunities, participates directly in calls for tenders as a leader or partner organization and involves its members on a case-by-case basis;
- Transnational technology transfer: It provides on-line standard and customized services through its information hub, the INSME portal;
- Lobbying activities and advocacy: It supports the reputation and the role played by intermediaries in SME creation and economic development, and their recognition by Governments and international financing institutions;
- Know-how and staff exchange: INSME facilitates the exchange of expertise, professionals and good practices within its network. A number of online thematic working groups are already active;
- Studying SME innovation trends: It represents an observatory for mapping and monitoring SME innovation policies and financial instruments at national and international level, as well as good practices in this area in order to inspire the definition of new political guidelines.
